PUBLICATION OFFICE, 31 AND 32 PARK ROW, NEW YORK.

VOL. XXVII., No. 3. NEW YORK, January 17, 1885. WHOLE No. 677.

READY NEXT WEEK:

THE MONEY-MAKERS; A Social Parable.

A NOVEL. 1 vol., 16mo, cloth, 337 pp.

"The Money-Makers" is a remarkable picture of American social and political life, designed largely as an answer to the much-discussed "Bread-Winners." It is written in an uncommonly vigorous style; there is a good deal of stirring movement; it satirizes many of the vices of the day; and presents a number of portraits the fidelity of which to certain outcomes of our social life will be generally recognized. "The Money-Makers" is from the hands of an experienced writer, whose incognito will be strictly preserved.

ROSLYN'S FORTUNE.

A NOVEL. BY CHRISTIAN REID. 12mo, cloth. Price, $1.25.

Christian Reid has been almost by common consent accorded the first place among the female novelists of the Southern States. "Her novels," says "Good Literature," "may, we think, be classified among the restful sort. Free entirely from the suspicion of sensationalism, they are also free from the opposite danger, dullness."

NOTES IN SEASON.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. publish this week two new volumes by Emma Marshall, entitled "In Colston's Day" and "In the East Country."

HENRY HOLT & Co. will publish at once an English translation of "Le Chanson du Roland," by Prof. Rabillon of the Johns Hopkins University.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish next week "The Money-Makers—a Social Parable," an anonymous novel, which is described as "a remarkable picture of American social and political life, designed largely as an answer to the much-discussed 'Bread-Winners.'" They will publish at the same time a new novel by Christian Reid, (Frances C. Fisher,) entitled "Roslyn's Fortune."

JAMES R. OSGOOD & Co. have ready "The Mystery of the Locks," a new story by Edgar W. Howe, which promises to rival the author's first work, "The Story of a Country Town." They have also just ready in "vest-pocket" style, "The Elevator," by W. D. Howells, another delightful sketch, which his admirers think surpasses even "The Register," in extravagant and delightful humor.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish shortly "American Orations," from the Colonial period to the present time, selected as specimens of eloquence, and with special reference to their value in throwing light upon the more important epochs and issues of American history, edited, with introductions and notes, by Alexander Johnston. The work will be in three volumes, uniform with "Prose Masterpieces."

LEE & SHEPARD have just ready "Evolution and Christianity; or, an Answer to the Development of Infidelity of Modern Times," by Dr. Benjamin F. Tefft, formerly President of Genesee College, N. Y., and author of "Hungary and Kossuth," etc., with an introductory letter by Bishop Simpson; also "Our Bodies; or, How We Live," by Dr. Albert F. Blaisdell, a brief, suggestive, and interesting text-book of physiology and hygiene, written in a crisp and pointed style, from the standpoint of health and simple experiments. It contains black-board exercises and diagrams, notes, glossary, index, and illustrations.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish next week Volume IX. of Stories by American Authors, comprising, "Marse Chan," by Thomas Nelson Page; "Mr. Bixby's Christmas Visitor," by Charles S. Gage; "Eli," by C. H. White; "Young Strong of the Clarion," by Millicent Washburn Shinn; "How Old Wiggins Wore Ship," by Captain Roland C. Coffin; "—mas has Come," by Leonard Kip. They will also publish the first and third volumes of the series entitled Personal Traits of British Authors, edited by Edward T. Mason, comprising sketches of Byron, Shelley, Moore, Rogers, Keats, Southey, Landor, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Lamb, Hazlitt, Leigh Hunt, and Procter.

D. LOTHROP & Co. have issued an admirable biography of the eminent Unitarian minister, the late Warren H. Cudworth, of Boston, prepared by his sister; "The Gray Masque, and Other Poems," by Mary Barker Dodge, a collection of the poems of one who has gained no mean reputation by such poems as "The Indian Summer," "My Baby," etc.; "Red-Letter Stories," translated from the German of Johanna Spyri, by Lucy Wheelock, of Chauncy Hall School; "Interrupted," a charming story by Pansy; and "Lift up your Hearts," by Rose Porter, a compilation of helpful thoughts for the overcoming of the world, printed in brown ink and issued in vest-pocket style, with flexible covers. They have just ready a remarkable story, entitled "Evolution of Dodd," by Wm. Hanley Smith, which treats of some phases of young life as connected with our public school system in a manner so full of the keenest satire and the deepest pathos as to command the absorbing interest of every reader from the first page to the last.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish next week three new books of very different character, but all of real importance. Mr. Woodberry's "Life of Poe" will be one of the most popular volumes in its series, American Men of Letters, both because of the fascination which Poe's career has for many, and for the great care Mr. Woodberry has taken to give all the facts of Poe's life and to procure material, (notably Poe's letters to Mr. Lowell,) never before used. Dr. Josiah Royce, of Harvard, has endeavored to find a valid basis for religion in certain philosophical facts and principles, and to show that the very doubts of men respecting the basis of religion indicate a substantial foundation for it. His work, "The Religious Aspect of Philosophy," is of interest to the general reader as well as to students of philosophy. "Congressional Government," by Woodrow Wilson, is a book of special attraction for all who are interested in the forms and spirit of American law-making. It is valuable historically, and yet more as indicating tendencies and defects that imperatively demand correction.

A translation of Il tramonto d'un ideale, a novel of modern Italian life, by one of the best Italian novelists. It deals with a variety of social problems now occupying the attention of Italian thinkers, and gives a very attractive series of pictures of village life in the north of Italy. The hero is the son of the village doctor, an ignorant, hot-tempered old man, and early grows out of the life he is born into; he goes to Milan, and after years of obscurity and poverty becomes a great lawyer. His love experience furnishes the title to the book.
- Connecticut. The joint stock act of Connecticut, passed Jan. session, 1880, and its amendments up to 1884, with notes from Conn. decisions and forms. Comp. by J. S. Beach. [5th ed.] New Haven, H. H. Peck, 1884. 7+217 p. D. shp., $2.50.

* In this list, the titles generally are verbatim transcriptions (according to the rule of the American Library Association) from books received. Books not received are indicated by a prefixed asterisk, and this office cannot be held responsible for the correctness of their record. This list will be reprinted, verbatim, with all the notices of the books received, in the TRADE LIST ANNUAL.

Edwards, Jonathan, D. D. Memoirs of Rev. David Brainerd; based on the life prepared by Jonathan Edwards, D. D., and afterwards rev. and enl. by Sereno E. Dwight, D. D.; ed. by J. M. Sherwood, with an introduction on the life and character of David Brainerd by the editor; [also] an essay on God's hand in missions by Arthur T. Pierson, D. D. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1884. 80+354 p. D. cl., $1.50.

David Brainerd was the distinguished missionary to the American Indians who died at the house of the great Dr. Jonathan Edwards, 1747. The story of his life has long been out of print, and it has been thought well to republish it in its present form, somewhat condensed in parts, and with many notes, a new preface, etc.

Emerson, Willis G. Winning winds; American novel. N. Y., G. W. Carleton & Co., 1885. D. cl., $1.50.

Gréville, Henry, [pseud. for Mme. Alice Durand.] Mam'zelle Eugénie: a Russian love-story. Phil., T. B. Peterson & Bros., [1885.] 18-148 p. sq. S. pap., 50 c.

This pretty little love-story gives a vivid picture of Russian life and quaint old Russian customs. The plot is quite original in the noble self-sacrifice it depicts in one of the lovers. Although not much more than a sketch, will compare with Mme. Gréville's best work in this direction.

Harrison, Gabriel. John Howard Payne, dramatist, poet, actor and author of "Home, sweet home"; his life and writings. Rev. ed. Phil., J. B. Lippincott & Co., 1884. 404 p. il. O. cl., $3.

Hastings, F. Obscure characters and minor lights of scripture. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1885. 5+284 p. D. cl., $1.

A book of suggestive and interesting sketches of persons in scripture history whose records, though less conspicuous than the prominent and better-known characters of the Bible, are worthy of careful study, because of the light they throw upon the complete truths revealed in sacred writ.

Kitchen, J. M. W., M. D. Consumption; its nature, causes, prevention, and cure. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1885. 3+223 p. sq. S. cl., $1.25.

Dr. Kitchen believes that consumption is not only largely preventable, but where the conditions are favorable it is a curable disease. He goes fully into his method of treatment, which is in a great measure hygienic, medicines being little used. He begins with a brief description of the nature, symptoms, causes, etc., of consumption, and of the anatomy, physiology, and hygiene of the structures in which the disease usually occurs.

- MacArthur, Arthur. Education in its relation to manual industry. N. Y., Appleton, 1884. 15+393 p. D. cl., $1.50.
Treats quite exhaustively the subjects of industrial schools and technical training. The author considers the great want in our present system of education is the lack of all attempt to give children practical knowledge in those general principles which relate to the trades and arts. To prove what has been done in that line in other countries, very full descriptions are given of the training schools of France, Germany, England, Russia, etc., etc.
- Moak, Nathaniel C. Reports of cases decided by the English courts, with notes and ref. V. 35: [1881-83]. Albany, W. Gould & Son, 1884. 11+912 p. O. shp., $6.

- O'Rell, Max. John Bull and his daughters; from the French. N. Y., J. W. Lovell Co., [1884.] 4+186 p. S. (Lovell's lib., no. 459.) pap., 20 c.
The chief interest in the book lies in the comparisons between French and English customs and social institutions. The author has much to say in favor of English women's beauty, hospitality, and virtue, and gives some just and true observations on their habits and customs in the spirit of an intelligent foreign observer. "The worst feature of the book," says the N. Y. Tribune, is a latent suggestiveness which it seems almost impossible for the Frenchman who writes about women at all, to keep clear from."
- Oliver, Pen. Charley Kingston's aunt. N. Y., Macmillan, 1885. 316 p. D. cl., $1.
- Parkman, Francis. Montcalm and Wolfe. 3d ed. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1884. 2 v., 14+514; 10+502 p. por. and maps, O. cl., $5.
These two volumes are a departure from chronological sequence. The period between 1700 and 1748 has been passed over for a time by Mr. Parkman. When this gap is filled, the series of "France and England in North America," of which this is the seventh part, will form a continuous history of the French occupation of the continent. The subject embraces the fall of New France and the ending of French dominion in Canada. It begins with Braddock's defeat and ends with the fall of Quebec. It is treated with all of Mr. Parkman's usual picturesqueness and specially felicitous style of description. There are authenticated portraits of Montcalm and Wolfe, maps, plans of battle, numerous foot-notes, an appendix and complete index.
- Porter, D. D. Allan Dare and Robert le Diable: a romance. In 9 pts. Pts. 7, 8 and 9. N. Y., Appleton, 1885. 577-672; 673-876 p. O. pap., pt. 7, 25 c.; pts. 8 and 9, 50 c.
- Plunkett, Mrs. H. M. Women, plumbers, and doctors; or, household sanitation. N. Y., Appleton, 1885. 1+248 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.
Goes most thoroughly into the subject of hygienic plumbing. The book is chiefly addressed to women, to whom it gives much sound, practical advice as to the method to be pursued in arriving at a correct estimate of the condition of the house from cellar to attic, regarding its sewerage and plumbing.
- Raspé, Rudolph E. The travels and surprising adventures of Baron Munchausen; il. with 37 curious eng. from the Baron's own designs and 5 wood-cuts by G. Cruikshank. N. Y., F. Warne & Co., 1885. 268 p. D. (Chandos classics.) cl., 80 c.

The subjects of socialism, communism, and vivisection are brought largely into the plot.

Warden, Florence. Deldee, the ward of Waringham: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1885. 379 p. D. pap., 25 c.

The author of "At the world's mercy" and "The house on the marsh" lays the scene of her latest work in the County of Norfolk, England. The heroine is found under a shed by the heir of the county magnate, who persuades his aristocratic relations to rear her as the child of the house. At twenty-two she returns to her adopted father's house, and is witness to a series of incidents that bring about the death of her guardian and lead to her marriage with Captain Morrison, a man living to revenge himself upon the betrayer of his sister. There is an ingeniously managed case of mistaken identity, and the author shows much practical knowledge of the English laws of inheritance. Published in the "Seaside library" under the title of "The iron hand; or, Deldee, the ward of Waringham."

This is more than a mere critique; it is a valuable exposition of the main facts in the life of Buddha, and the claims which his religion can justly make upon mankind. Mr. Wilkinson believes that Mr. Arnold's poem has had a weakening effect on the faith and conscience of America, and aims to lay bare the discrepancies between the facts and the fictions in reference to Buddhism.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE Novellen-Schatz, published by S. Zickel, has entered upon its twenty-sixth volume.

PROF. W. G. SUMNER is printing in Harper's Weekly a series of papers on "Our Currency during the Last Twenty Years."

Freund's Weekly, the spicy dramatic paper, has changed its name to Freund's Music and Drama, and its publication day from Friday to Thursday.

The Brooklyn Magazine is to have a department of Home Interests, the editorial conduct of which will be in the hands of Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher.

P. BLAKISTON, SON & CO. will issue in the January number of the Polyclinic a bibliography of the American and English medical books published in 1884.

The Literary World for January 10th prints an article of nearly four pages, by Mr. Frederick T. Fuller, a nephew of Margaret Fuller, defending her memory from the aspersions flung upon it by the publication of words of Hawthorne in the new life by his son.

THE leading article in the December number of the Bay State Monthly is a sketch of Daniel Lothrop, the publisher. One of the illustrations is a view of the Wayside at Concord, the Hawthorne home, which Mr. Lothrop purchased a few years ago.

THE current paper in the Authors at Home Series, now running in the Critic, is an account of the domestic life and literary labors of Mark Twain at "Nook Farm" (his home at Hartford) and at Elmira, N. Y. It is written by Mr. Charles H. Clark, of the Hartford Courant.

THE Decorator and Furnisher steadily increases in interest and usefulness. Every number is crowded with information on every phase of decorative art, lavishly illustrated with original designs in the text, full-page and in sets, the latter, in most cases, being printed in tint or a number of colors. Taken all in all, this is not only one of the most interesting but also the handsomest trade journals that reaches us.

THE Mutual Bookseller and Stationer is the title of a monthly paper of which the first number is issued under date of January, by the Mutual News Co. It is a sixteen-page sheet, size twelve by fifteen, containing, in addition to the price list of the News Co. and some general advertisements, some columns of book notices. The price is nominally fifty cents per year, but it is evidently intended for gratuitous distribution.

Industrial America is the title of a new journal to be issued every other Saturday from No. 9 Murray St., N. Y. It promises to be a "journal that will be a faithful record of progress in the industrial arts, treating subjects of general interest in an able manner and from a popular standpoint, and yet not be a vehicle for carefully worded advertisements." It will be issued under the same general management as the Electrical World.

THE HAWLEY COPYRIGHT BILL.

WE gave, last week, the text of the new bill for international copyright introduced into the Senate by General Hawley, with the approval of the Copyright League, and reprint in this issue the comments of the Evening Post and a most important article from the Commercial Advertiser. The bill itself is the nearest approach to an authors'-rights bill which has come under discussion for some time, the only limitations being those of our own domestic copyright system and the reciprocity clause that extends its advantages only to those countries which give to our own citizens kindred privileges. It does not attempt to give to citizens of other countries more rights or privileges than our own citizens enjoy, and it seems to be sound sense that the extension of copyright privileges should begin, like charity, at home.

The Commercial Advertiser makes a special plea for a manufacturing clause, and in so doing goes far beyond the ground taken by most publishers or by the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. In fact, it seems to us extravagant to suggest that the greater portion of the American manufacture of books would be transferred to England under an international copyright without a manufacturing clause. It is undoubtedly true that some of the large publishers who deal extensively and directly with English authors, would find it to their advantage, in case the duty of twenty per cent on books were removed without the removal of the duties on the material of books, to do some of their manufacturing on the other side, and it is also the fact that almost every scheme for reducing the tariff has proposed to remove the duty on books without much reference to the duty on materials, thus putting the cart before the horse and turning things upside down. But that pure and simple international copyright, in the absence of changes in the tariff, would so result, does not seem to us within the probabilities. The real key to the situation is the fear that the tariff on books will be lowered or abolished without a corresponding reduction on materials, so that unless the copyright act contains a manufacturing clause the result prophesied by the Commercial may in part come about.

It is exceedingly improbable, however, that any bill without a manufacturing clause can pass the Lower even if it can pass the Upper House, in view of the persistent opposition already developed. If, however, the Senate, which has peculiar cognizance of foreign relations, is willing to pass the Hawley bill, that result ought to be hailed with delight by every friend of international copyright. If it is also true that a bill introduced into the Senate this year can hold over to another Congress, that will leave the cause in much better fighting trim for next year, even should the Senate fail absolutely to pass the bill. If the House should then pass a bill covering manufacturing, a conference committee could easily settle the question by a practical compromise. We trust, therefore, that every effort will be made by the friends of international copyright to forward the Hawley bill in the Senate.

In speaking of manufacturing as a necessary concession to opponents of international copyright pure and simple, we do not wish to seem to accept even as a compromise measure the extreme claims that type-setting and engraving should be a part of the manufacturing required. This would double the original cost of the work to the consumer without adequate return. On successful books especially—and it is these chiefly which are reprinted in this country—the type-setting is not a great portion of the total cost, while the presswork has to be done each sheet for itself whether in England or America. In fact, a clause which should go beyond printing in its definition of manufacturing would be not a compromise at all, but a concession to the extreme element hardly to be asked for. We understand that even in Philadelphia these extreme views are held, not by publishers and the book trade, but by the printers, type-founders, etc., who constitute what is known as the Book Trade Association, which includes scarcely any publishers or booksellers.

OUR Annual Summary number will be the issue for January 31, being made the last number of the month to accommodate publishers who hesitate to resume work too soon after the reaction from the holiday trade. In view of the lateness of this date, we are most anxious to issue the number absolutely on time, and to include in it the index which has always been found one of its most valuable features, but which has hitherto been sent out with a later number. To accomplish these two purposes, we must ask our advertising friends to send in their copy at once, and we particularly urge upon the smaller publishers, who have not given the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY their support during the past year, to use this opportunity to do themselves as well as us the service of putting before the trade in this number a short title-list of their issues of the year. This number is, in fact, a sort of supplement to "The Trade List Annual," which every live bookseller keeps constantly at hand for reference.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT.

THE HAWLEY BILL AND THE MANUFACTURING CLAUSE.

From the Commercial Advertiser, Jan. 9.

THE introduction of Mr. Hawley's bill concerning international copyright brings that subject again under discussion, and while, for reasons already set forth in this journal, we do not believe that the bill as it stands can be passed, we earnestly hope that its discussion may lead to a better understanding than now exists and a franker recognition of the conditions of the problem to be solved. In aid of that we offer here some considerations which it seems to us necessary to keep in mind.

The end sought is a perfectly plain and practical one, which must commend itself to every fair and honest mind. It is desired to secure to foreign authors the right, which is undoubtedly theirs in morals, to share in the profits obtained from American reprints of their works; and to secure American authors against the unfair and destructive competition of literature which costs the publishers nothing because the law allows any one who pleases to reprint foreign works at will. The reasons for seeking these ends are first that common honesty and decency demand so much at our hands, and secondly that so long as we shall neglect to ordain justice in this matter, the growth of an American literature, reflecting our own life, expressing our own thought, promulgating our doctrines, teaching our truths and giving direct and indirect employment to many thousands of our own people, must be seriously retarded, to the much greater loss of the country and people than most persons imagine.

So far as the main proposition goes—namely, that we ought, by the enactment of just laws, to protect the foreign author in his property rights, and the American author from the most unfair and ruinous competition to which any workman was ever subjected—there should be no dispute or difference of opinion; and in fact there is none among men who have permitted themselves to think honestly upon the subject. There is some hurtful indifference on the part of many persons who do not understand how vitally the whole country is interested in this simple doing of justice, but there are hardly two opinions upon the main point.

There is difference of opinion, however, as to methods, and neglect to bring all opinions into harmony by a fair recognition of facts, and by judicious compromise where perfect agreement cannot be secured, has resulted thus far in the defeat of every effort made to secure international copyright. We are ourselves earnestly in favor of copyright, both upon principle and from convictions of policy. We believe that justice demands a law of international copyright, and that practical policy dictates the passage of such a law, and it is for the purpose of aiding to secure it that we desire now to ask the attention of those who most zealously seek it to obstacles that stand in the way, partly, we are persuaded, through their fault.

We in this country have no need to be told that the parrot-like denunciation of our publishers as "pirates," in which Englishmen habitually indulge, is founded upon ignorance and misconception. We know that reputable American publishers habitually pay English authors far more liberally than English publishers pay American writers for their books reprinted in England, and that, too, in spite of the fact that no American publisher has any security against the pirating of the book for which he has paid a voluntary copyright by some Canadian or other printer doing business in Montreal or New York. He is even without protection—beyond what the tariff on books affords—against the shipment of large editions of the book for which he has paid, by the English publisher, who can print much more cheaply than he. Yet all our publishers of repute pay copyright voluntarily when they can. They are neither pirates nor freebooters, and they would be glad of a law which would enable them to pay foreign authors full rates of royalty, by protecting the copyrights of the books which they purchase the right to publish in the United States.

But they argue, with justice, that in securing the foreign author in his property rights and the American author against unfair competition, it is neither necessary nor just to destroy the vast interests and industries represented in American publishing. Apart from all questions of abstract right—though not in violation of such right—sound policy demands that whatever we do in this matter shall be done with the least possible hurt to our own publishers, printers, paper-makers, type-founders, bookbinders and decorators, artists, die-sinkers, inkmakers, clerks, editors, readers for the press, and the rest—classes numbering tens of thousands and representing millions of dollars of actively and beneficently employed capital. There can be no doubt that the presence of these people and their industries among us is of incalculable advantage to the country, and the destruction of their employments would be at once a gross outrage and a great calamity. The extremest dogma of economies does not demand such destruction, and no requirement of justice calls for it. Granting that an author's right in his literary property is absolute and exclusive, it does not follow that his assertion of it may rightfully be reckless of the interests of others where no necessity for such recklessness exists. Human society is a very complex affair, and its rights so run into each other that their separation by law must involve something other than abstract, arbitrary, and dogmatic definitions.

Let us inquire precisely how the matter stands and see, if we can, how and to what extent the enactment of injudiciously framed copyright laws may endanger the interests and industries to which we have referred, and how the practical end sought may be secured without the doing of such injustice and such damage to industrial interests.

The enactment of a law to put the foreign author or proprietor of literary works precisely on the same plane with the American author or proprietor, without conditions of any kind, seems at first sight the short and simple road to right and justice. But what would be the effect of such enactment? We who would be the authors of that law—that is to say, we the people of the United States—have already created certain conditions for which we are responsible. We have adopted a system of high protective duties, whether rightly or wrongly, it is now no part of our purpose to inquire. We have imposed heavy duties upon paper and other materials used in publishing, which make the cost of those materials much greater in this country than in England. We have put like duties upon nearly all the articles consumed by the families of the workmen who make paper, mould type, build presses, print books, bind them, or are in any other way employed directly or indirectly in book manufacture. We have thus made it impossible that the American publisher shall buy either materials or labor as cheap as the English publisher does. In other words, we have, by our own legislation, created conditions which make it much more costly to manufacture books here than it is to make them in England. The tariff duty on manufactured books does not at all offset this disadvantage, and hence the first effect of such a law as that contemplated by Mr. Hawley's bill is likely to be to put an end to the manufacture of books in the United States. And by this we mean not only the reprinting of foreign books, but the original printing of American works as well, because the law of copyright recognizes the "proprietor" as well as the author of a book as entitled to copyright and makes copyright assignable. The English book manufacturer, working under free-trade conditions, could and would outbid the American publisher, even for American books, not in fair competition, but under special favor of our protective system, which in that case would operate to protect the foreign manufacturer against his American competitor. American as well as English books would be printed in England on English paper, with English type, by English workmen; they would be stitched, and bound, and tooled and finished there for the American market, not because free-trade principles make that the cheapest market in which to buy, but because after placing the burdens of a protective system upon the business of book-making we subject it to a single condition of free trade.

The result would probably be the compulsory removal of all our publishers to London; the destruction of our type-founding, paper-making, and press-building industries, so far as these are concerned with book publication; the closing of our book binderies, and the dismissal of many thousands of skilled and unskilled workmen, whose services would be no longer needed. In addition to all this American authors would suffer grievously. Half the earnings of more than half of them are made by work for publishing houses in other ways than in book writing. They are readers, critics, editors, revisers, compilers, etc., and all that bread-winning work would be taken out of their hands. Their chance for a hearing even for their books would be greatly reduced by the removal of their best friends, the publishers, to London, and their rates of pay for such books as they might get published would be reduced to the standard created by the smaller cost of living in England.

These are facts which must be confronted, and we ask those with whose desire for international copyright we are in heartiest sympathy whether it would not be better to recognize them and adjust our action to circumstances that actually exist, than to proceed blindly upon an abstraction, in reckless disregard of the facts? Full copyright protection may be provided for the foreign author to his advantage and to the complete protection of the American author, without inviting these disasters. Why should not that course be taken? Why should not a manufacturing clause be included in the Copyright bill? Granting that the free-trade doctrine is the sound one, the fact remains that we are not living in free-trade conditions. The injustice of imposing a single free-trade condition upon industries otherwise subjected to the burdens of a protective system must be apparent alike to free-traders and protectionists, and to all men of fair perceptions. It is precisely that that Mr. S. S. Cox complains of in the law which, while lowering the duty on manufactured cloaks, retained the relatively higher duty on the materials used in cloak-making, thereby subjecting our cloak-makers to one free-trade condition while binding them to all the other conditions of the protective system, and making them bear the burdens of both with the advantages of neither.

Apart from the injustice and impolicy of putting the copyright law in such form as to destroy our own industries by this impracticable combination of conditions belonging to antagonistic systems, there remains the practical consideration that in order to secure international copyright at all we need quite all the assistance we can secure, and that by yielding a manufacturing clause to the publishing and other interests named, we can win their powerful assistance in securing the only really essential thing that we seek—namely, full international copyright. To our arguments and moral suasion there will in any case be opposed popular prejudice and indifference, and the most strenuous activity of men deeply interested in the business of reprinting foreign works without paying aught for them. Against such interested opposition we urgently need the assistance of the great publishers and their allies, and we can make them earnest workers with us in this good cause if we recognize the facts of the situation and ask only for that for which there is need to ask. Working shoulder to shoulder with them, we shall have reason to hope for success; while if we obstinately insist upon driving them out of our camp to that of the enemy, our chance of success, to say the least of it, must be very greatly reduced. Is it not the part of practical wisdom to recognize such facts as these? Is it ever wise to throw away the substance of good things in order to grasp at the shadow?

From the N. Y. Evening Post, Jan. 5.

It will be seen that this bill gives foreigners copyright here only when their government gives us copyright in its own jurisdiction. Under its provisions we shall get rather more than we give, for the copyright laws of most foreign countries are more liberal than ours; but this arises from the different policies of different countries, and is no objection to the bill, which abolishes the distinction between citizens and foreigners, and gives, for instance, American and English authors in either country precisely equal rights.

The object to be accomplished by this measure is precisely the same as that of the Dorsheimer bill of last year. It is a more concise bill, and will, no doubt, have the support of all those who are in favor of international copyright. There is, we understand, no antagonism between the two measures, but as action in the House this winter seems out of the question, and as the present House passes out of existence in a few weeks, the bill has been introduced into the Senate, whose existence is continuous, to expedite matters, and not to have to begin the work of agitation entirely anew next winter.

Public opinion has within the past four years made great strides in favor of an author's international copyright bill. The President in his annual message this year commended the subject to the attention of Congress, and the Judiciary Committee of the House reported a year ago through Mr. Dorsheimer, that the justice of such a bill was too manifest to make it necessary to enter into any discussion, and urged the passage of a measure which would "remove the just reproach which has so long rested upon American law and practice." Many people suppose that foreign governments foster piracy of American works, just as our laws encourage the pillage of foreign authors; but this is an entire mistake. In England foreigners may secure copyright if they are within the British dominion at the time of publication; and a general law on the subject authorizes the Queen at any time to direct, by Order in Council, that foreign authors shall be entitled to English copyrights when the country of which the foreign author is a citizen has granted reciprocal rights. Neither France nor Italy makes any distinction between foreigners and natives; and Spain gives foreigners copyright privileges for the same time accorded them in their own country. It may thus fairly be said that the general policy of civilized modern States is to foster literature without regard to nationality, while it is reserved for the United States alone to foster the trade of piracy at the expense of literature.

Germany has a copyright law which protects the foreign author on condition that his work shall be published by a house having its place of business in Germany, but this seems to be the only State which has applied the protective principle in this way. The Copyright League takes the ground that any attempt to apply the protective system to copyrights between this and foreign countries will break down, because in the case of the country with which (on account of the identity of language) we most need to establish copyright and break up piracy—that is, England—the provisions of her international law recognize only author's rights, and the condition of publication or manufacture in this country would destroy the reciprocity and justice of the scheme.

Most of the publishers—to judge by their support of the Dorsheimer bill last year—have come to the conclusion that the choice lies between a simple author's copyright bill and a continuance of the present unfortunate system, which even those most strenuous in their advocacy of protection to American manufactures may well object to. Piracy, of course, operates as a discrimination in favor of foreign cheap literary labor—cheap because it is not paid for. Supposing an English and American author to stand, for example, on about the same level, the English book can be produced and sold here for a sum which represents the cost of publication and a small profit, while the price of the American book must also include a royalty for the author. Is this protection to American literary labor?

But it has always seemed to us that there was no reason here for introducing the question of free trade and protection at all. What the advocates of international copyright ask is merely the protection of a property right, a right of ownership, between countries which is now recognized in the domestic law of all countries. We do not make it a condition of a foreigner's right to own his coat or his hat or even to sell coats and hats that they shall be manufactured in this country. And if he has patented coats or hats, or other objects, his right in them our law will protect by patent here. We provide that if he imports them they shall pay duties, and in the same way we have a tariff on books and on all the materials which enter into the manufacture of books. To go to the point of insisting that a foreign author shall be robbed of his property unless he manufactures it here is hardly giving that encouragement to literature which is among the duties imposed by the Constitution on Congress.

VIEWS OF SOME NEW YORK PUBLISHERS.

From the Commercial Advertiser, Jan. 8.

ONE of the Messrs. Harper said this morning that General Hawley's Copyright bill was the simplest and, in some ways, the best that had been presented for international copyright, it being substantially an amendment to the copyright statute, with which we are already familiar.

He doubted, however, whether, with the present prevailing sentiment for protection, any bill could be passed which did not provide for the printing of the book in this country, and its issue to American readers nearly simultaneously with the foreign edition.

Mr. Charles Scribner: "I favor the bill because it is simple and honest. It is not encumbered with manufacturing clauses, but, so far as I see, goes straight to the point."

Mr. Holt, of Henry Holt & Co.: "The bill is the best of its kind that has been presented, because it is intended to do the only essential thing, namely, to protect the maker in the enjoyment of what he has made. Objections to some of these former schemes has done much to impede the success of such plans for copyright. But more has been done by thieves, who still had enough sense of shame to prevent their saying that they wanted to retain the privilege of stealing. This bill holds out few pretexts for opposition."

Mr. George H. Putnam: "I think the bill introduced in Congress, yesterday, a very good one, and should like to see it passed. If it could be made a law immediately, it would doubtless work some harm to the American publisher on account of the present state of our tariff—for I am a free-trader. But I am willing for one, and our house is willing, to accept the injury because so much benefit will accrue. Upon the whole, I think it is better that no manufacturing clause has been attached to the measure."

MARK TWAIN VS. ESTES & LAURIAT.

A DESPATCH to the N. Y. Times states that on the 14th inst. "Judge Colt heard, in the United States Circuit Court, the case of Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) against Estes & Lauriat, publishers, in this city. The complainant wished to enjoin Estes & Lauriat from issuing a catalogue offering Mark Twain's unpublished book, 'Huckleberry Finn,' at a price less than the subscription rate, and also from collusion with the subscription agents, so as to obtain the books at a price less than their agreement allowed. George L. Huntress and S. Lincoln appeared for Mr. Clemens, and S. J. Elder for Estes & Lauriat. Mr. Huntress explained the difference between the 'subscription' method of sale and the 'trade' method, and declared that the custom had always been that subscription books should not be sold to the trade and should not be sold at prices less than the rate set by the publishers. He cited the case of Prince Albert against Strange. The latter obtained plates of a private book of etchings of Prince Albert and the Queen and advertised the etchings for exhibition. He was restrained not only from exhibiting the etchings, but also from advertising them. Mark Twain's book will not be ready for four or five weeks, yet last month Estes & Lauriat advertised in their catalogue the book as then ready for sale at the price of $2.25, instead of $2.75, the subscription rate. They based their advertisement on the probability of causing some agent to break his agreement by selling to them at reduced rates. The affidavit of Charles L. Webster, of New York, publisher for Mark Twain, stated the agreements which every agent had to sign, agreeing not to sell the book to booksellers or to any one except subscribers. The affidavits of Charles E. Lauriat, Dana Estes, and others connected with the firm offered testimony substantiating the declarations of counsel. They denied having approached any agent to corrupt him. Mr. Elder stated that out of courtesy the firm would not send out any more catalogues, but good faith with their customers required them to fulfil the orders already received and to be received. Upon the convening of the court in the afternoon Mr. Lincoln made his argument for Mr. Clemens, and Mr. Elder cited certain authorities bearing upon his side of the case, and the court took the papers and reserved decision."

BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION.

At the November and December meetings of the Board of Trustees of the Association the following applications for membership were received:

Remsen Darling, 57 Beekman St., N. Y.
John T. Kempton, 181 William St., N. Y.
Clarence M. Ward, 74 Orange St., Brooklyn, N. Y.
Fred. A. Jones, 186 Washington St., Boston, Mass.
Edward Lynde Dillingham, 118 East 17th St., N. Y.
Robert Wm. Peach, 39 Dey St., N. Y.
Dwight P. Jackson, 77 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.
William Brantley Burke, 47 W. Cain St., Atlanta, Ga.

The amount paid on the last death claim (James B. Carroll) was a trifle over $800, and was obtained at an expense of $22, running over a period of three years. This ought to be cheap enough to satisfy the most economical of men. As all members of the book trade are having a little leisure just now, won't they give a little time to pushing the membership of the Association? Applications can be had of the undersigned.

BUSINESS NOTES.

NEW YORK CITY.—Baird & Dillon, publishers of "The Household Bible," "Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms," "The Universal Encyclopædia," "Webster's Dictionary," etc., have removed to 120 Chambers and 50 Warren Streets.

PHILADELPHIA.—C. M. Lea, C. C. Febiger, and Henry M. Barnes, general partners, and H. C. Lea, special partner of the firm of H. C. Lea's Son & Co., have dissolved partnership. The business heretofore conducted by the old firm will be continued by C. M. Lea, C. C. Febiger, Arthur H. Lea, and Henry M. Barnes, trading as Lea Bros. & Co.

PHILADELPHIA.—In the early part of February J. B. Lippincott & Co. will become a stock company, having the offices of President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer, together with a Board of Directors. No material change will take place in the business, which will be continued as heretofore. Particulars will be given later.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

CUPPLES, UPHAM & Co. will publish shortly Mrs. Grace A. Oliver's "Life of Dean Stanley."

S. ZICKEL has published a small volume entitled "Grundsätze der Littenlehre für freisinnige Lehrer, Erzieher, Zöglinge und Eltern," by I. Keller.

ORANGE JUDD Co. have in press a work on "The Peanut Plant—its Cultivation and Uses," by B. W. Jones; also "A Dictionary of English Names of Plants."

D. APPLETON & Co. have published a "Social History of the Eighth International Medical Congress, held in Copenhagen, August, 1884," by Dr. D. Bryson Delavan.

THE fourth volume of the letters of Count Cavour, edited by Signor Luigi Chiala, will be published this month at Turin. It contains two hundred and thirty-three documents, nearly all of which were written during the last months of Cavour's life.

JAMES R. OSGOOD & Co. have in press Gen. W. B. Hazen's book, "A Narrative of Military Service." It deals with the conduct of his command through the war, and consequently tells the story of Shiloh, of Stone River and Chickamauga, of Mission Ridge, and the March to the Sea.

FUNK & WAGNALLS have in press "A Brief History of Mormonism," by Mrs. Ellen E. Dickinson, a relative of Solomon Spaulding, from whose stolen manuscript the "Book of Mormon" was constructed. Mrs. Dickinson has had access to family papers and other sources of information hitherto unknown. Joseph Cook speaks most warmly of her and her work. Messrs. Funk & Wagnalls announce that "The Buntling Ball" rolled through an edition of 1500 copies in less than ten days, and that a second and larger edition is now ready.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT & Co. are about to publish a book entitled "Women of the Day," presenting a series of biographies of the notable women of all nations. It is written by Frances Hayes, and will meet a want long felt as a reference book. They have also nearly ready George Dolby's work, "Charles Dickens as I Knew Him—the Story of the Reading Tours in Great Britain and America, 1866-1870." Mr. Dolby, as has already been noted, was the secretary and manager of Dickens's later readings. He gives a most interesting description of the personality of Dickens, and a number of anecdotes, most of which are quite new.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will have ready in February a work which is likely to attract attention and excite discussion. It is entitled "The Religion of Philosophy," and the author is Raymond S. Perrin, of New York. Mr. Perrin has undertaken to analyze the chief philosophical and religious systems of the world, with a view to establishing a correct synthesis of human knowledge. He points out the generic relation of Christianity to the other great faiths, and offers a solution of the metaphysical problem of the categories of thought, as a means of building up the true science of morality. The English edition of the book will be published by Williams & Norgate.

SCRIBNER & WELFORD have just received a limited edition of a fac-simile of the first issue of "Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia," by Dr. Johnson, first published in the spring of 1759. The present fac-simile reprint is preceded by an interesting preface by Dr. Macaulay, in which a short history of the publication of the book is given and the circumstances surrounding its issue. A bibliographical list of editions of "Rasselas" is also given, from 1759 to the present day, which comprises what is believed to be an approximately complete record of all the known editions, including those translated into foreign languages, and instances in which "Rasselas" has been reprinted in collections of works by various authors. The reprint has been most successfully carried out, the quaint and characteristic type, paper, and binding of the time being faithfully reproduced.

THE publication of Admiral Porter's novel, "Allan Dare and Robert le Diable," in parts, was an experiment that at first was not looked upon favorably by the trade generally. It appeared to have been forgotten that all of Dickens's larger novels, and many of Thackeray's, were published in monthly parts, and hence, although a revival, there was nothing strictly new in this mode of publishing. Magazines are often bought specially for some particular serial novel publishing therein, and this being true, the question arises why should not readers purchase a novel issued separately in instalments? Mr. Wm. Black revised the plan a few years since in England by the issue of one of his novels in this shape. The opposition by some of the trade to "Allan Dare" in parts has yielded, we are told, to the steadily increasing demand for the work; and the orders for the work from readers by mail have been unusually large, greatly exceeding the usual proportion, suggesting that the ideas of the general public did not accord with those of the dealers.

WILL PUBLISH NEXT WEEK:

EDGAR ALLAN POE.

By GEORGE E. WOODBERRY. Volume 7 of "American Men of Letters." With fine Steel Portrait. 1 vol., 16mo, gilt top, $1.25.

This is the first complete, authentic, and adequate account of Poe's career and literary achievements. Mr. Woodberry has had access to many sources of information not open to previous biographers of Poe, and to many important letters from Poe, not included in any life of him hitherto published. He has consequently been able to solve the mystery which has invested certain portions of Poe's career, so that the story of his life is now clear and connected throughout. Mr. Woodberry's admirable critical faculty has enabled him to produce a book which is not only an excellent biography of Poe, but a very valuable addition to the series to which it belongs.

CONGRESSIONAL GOVERNMENT.

A Study in American Politics. By WOODROW WILSON. 1 vol., 16mo, $1.25.

Mr. Wilson has made a very careful and thorough study of the American system of Congressional government, which students of politics will find richly worth reading. He institutes a comparison of Congressional government with the Parliamentary government of Great Britain, indicating their points of likeness and of difference, and touches briefly on German and French Parliamentary government. He also points out the marked and progressive departure of Congress from the programme designed for it by the framers of the Constitution. Both historically and politically his work is one of great value, and cannot fail to command immediate and general attention.

THE RELIGIOUS ASPECT OF PHILOSOPHY.

A Critique of the Bases of Conduct and of Faith. By JOSIAH ROYCE, Ph.D., Instructor in Philosophy in Harvard College. 1 vol., crown 8vo, $2.00.

This work has peculiar claims to attention now when the interest in religious questions is so keen and so general. It discusses the deepest problems of religion in close connection with the first principles of a system of philosophy; not in a technical form, but so as to appeal to general readers who are interested in philosophy, and to students of philosophy who are interested in religion and human life. It is entirely free from any sectarian bias, and aims to show that the prevalent doubts about the basis of religion, when properly understood, contains the germ of a permanent doctrine about religion.

The Poets of the Church. Biographical Sketches of Hymn Writers and their Hymns. By EDWIN F. HATFIELD, D.D. One volume, small 8vo, 719 pages. $3.00.

"The late Dr. Hatfield was for many years a very diligent student of Hymnology. These sketches bear the marks of very careful investigation, and while full of information, are not simply an array of dates, but Biographical Sketches indeed, written in a style that cannot fail to instruct and interest the reader."

Resurrection in Nature and Revelation: AN ARGUMENT AND A MEDITATION. By D. W. FAUNCE, D.D. 12mo. $1.50.

"As a book full of spiritual thoughts, and full also of comfort and consolation to those whose thoughts dwell on those who have 'gone before,' it is heartily commended."

The Pilgrim's Progress.

WITH ONE HUNDRED ILLUSTRATIONS BY FRED. BARNARD AND OTHERS.

One volume, quarto, beautifully bound in cloth. Price, $4; by mail, $4.25. One hundred illustrations by Mr. FRED. BARNARD and others, engraved by DALZIEL BROTHERS. This edition, first published in 1880, and re-issued here, has been out of print for some time. The present re-issue, in 4to, is superbly printed on heavy toned paper, and bound in ornamental cloth, with gilt edges.

"In the immortal work of John Bunyan the figures stand out distinct; one can see Mr. Worldly Wiseman, Ignorance, Pliable, and the lonely pilgrims toiling along the narrow way, in the flesh. It is this feature of the book that Mr. Frederick Barnard has seized on, and with so much success, in the present edition. His strong point is his character-sketching, and he has never been more fortunate in his materials or more happy in his expressions. . . . The artists engaged on this edition have the happiness of seeing their work issued to the world under the most advantageous circumstances; every furtherance which artistic engraving, careful printing, and fine paper can give, is here—the whole enshrined in sumptuous binding. . . . Among such a number of excellent drawings it is invidious to attempt classification."—The Times, London.

1876-1884.

NOW READY: Author-and-title Alphabet.

4to, pp. 444.

The new AMERICAN CATALOGUE includes titles of nearly 20,000 books, recorded as issued between July 1, 1876, and June 30, 1884, entered in the first part by author and title, and in the second by subject. The work, when completed, will exceed 600 pages; the price, to present subscribers, is $10; after publication, it will be probably $12 or $15. The edition is limited to 1250 copies, and no plates are made.

Less than 50 copies remain unsold of the original AMERICAN CATALOGUE itself, now priced at $40. The price will probably be raised at an early date to $50 or $75 on the few remaining copies.

Five-yearly supplements hereafter will enhance the value of the original work and of the first supplement. Every owner of a private library and book-collector, as well as every bookseller and librarian, should have this invaluable key to American books.

READY NEXT WEEK:

Harriet Martineau.

The Tenth Volume in the Famous Women Series. By Mrs. F. FENWICK MILLER. Containing an entirely fresh record of the last Twenty-one Years of her life. One volume, 16mo, cloth. Price, $1.

"And as, until now, the true story of Harriet Martineau's life has been practically untold, we are heartily grateful to Mrs. Fenwick Miller for giving us a volume which, as a record, is full and veracious, and, as a portrait, realizable and faithful."—Academy.

Tarantella.

A Romance. By MATHILDE BLIND, author of "Life of George Eliot" (Famous Women Series). One volume, 12mo, cloth. Price $1.50.

"The name of Mathilde Blind affixed as author to anything is a guarantee of the writing being of the first order. Her present book is extremely clever, and the treatment of the weird subject she has chosen picturesque in the extreme. . . . The author's local coloring is especially fine, and her character-studies extremely strong. 'Tarantella' is a book which is bound to make its mark."—Whitehall Review.

Flatland.

A Romance of Many Dimensions. With Illustrations by the Author, A. SQUARE. One volume, 16mo, cloth. Price 75 cents.

"O day and night, but this is wondrous strange."

"And therefore as a stranger give it welcome."

"Not only likely to create a present sensation in the thinking world, but also to find an abiding place among the great satires of history."—Literary World.

"This attractive little book will be eagerly welcomed by the seekers of the fourth dimension. . . . Much of it will also be read with amusement, as satire, by those who do not appreciate its scientific bearing; or as pure nonsense by those who are not searching for satire. The assumption of the author is worked out with wonderful consistency."—Spectator.

Daddy Darwin's Dovecot.

A Country Tale. By JULIANA HORATIO EWING, author of "Jackanapes," "Jan of the Windmill," "Flat Iron for a Farthing," etc. Illustrated by Randolph Caldecott. One volume, square 12mo, paper board covers. Price 35 cents.

"Recalls George Eliot in its faithful setting of rustic life, as well as in its charming portraiture of a boy and a girl."—Academy.
